PRAYER FOR RAIN—O Mighty God, Your fingerprints are scattered across all of creation. Through each thing You have created. You show Your glory. Your caring and gentle nature are on display for all to see and experience. You open the heavens and bring the waters down from above. Lord, this very day we ask that You open the flood gates. Bring down nourishing rains, that the land may be quenched and bring forth much fruit. Amen.

FROM THE DESK OF FATHER STARMAN—

Dear Parishioners and Friends of the Catholic Parishes of Western Holt and Boyd Counties,

In Alice Walker's novel The Color Purple, Celie a battered and exploited woman, meets the exotic and free-spirited Shug. She tells Celie that mutual love should be the reality behind all our relationships; that love transfigures, and brutality disfigures; that it's not only pleasing God that matters, because God is always trying to please us back with surprises – just as Shug, the mistress of Celie's cold, distant husband, is a surprise for Celie.

The biggest “surprise” that God has sprung on the world is the love that takes flesh and comes among us as the Son. The gospel of this weekend's feast (John 3:16-18) again proclaims that God is not intent on judging and condemning the world, but judgment will happen – not as a future event but as a present reality for which we ourselves are responsible when we accept or reject the Son. Like Nicodemus – whose encounter with Jesus begins in the verses immediately preceding this weekend's gospel (which most regard as continuing the dialogue between him and Jesus) – we are often “night visitors” to the mystery of God, afraid to come to the light, wanting to keep our acceptance and understanding of God with the confines of our own manageable and limited experiences. This weekend's feast invites us to remember God's most gracious hospitality, most free and generous love for all created reality. Through Christ and the Spirit, in whom our humanity is born again when the waters of baptism break over us, we are a precious part of this creation.

It will often be a struggle to live what we are, and we need the encouragement that Paul gives to the Corinthians in his Second Letter (2 Cor.13:11-13). This is the letter in which Paul has to deal with the pain of attacks on his apostolic credentials, has admitted his weakness, and has needed to write strong criticism to this often-cantankerous church that he still loves dearly. In his closing, Paul bids the Corinthians farewell with words that encourage them to live in joy, peace, and love for one another, because this is the life that reflects the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit. Liturgically this is shown by the “holy kiss” (the sign of peace). Paul ends with the blessing that we would now describe as trinitarian: the grace that is received through the gift of Jesus Christ, the all-embracing love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit. This is the dynamism that binds together every Christian community. It is also the challenge to love, to comfort, to live in peace with one another.

As St. Augustine wrote, “If you see love, you see the Trinity.” Over and above all theological speculation, the best way of meditating on and understanding something of the extraordinary mystery of the Trinity is to reflect on the love we ordinary Christians show in our daily lives. Beautiful though this may be, it is only the faintest image of the Father, Son, and Spirit, whose communion is the source not only of responsibly to one another but to the whole independent cosmos.

Ad multos annos!

Fr. Bernard Starman
Pastor
