FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK . . .

Dear Parishioners and Friends of the Catholic Parishes of Western Holt and Boyd Counties,

The readings for All Souls' Day invite us to trust in the mercy of God and in his desire to care for each of us for eternity. "God will reward the just and punish the wicked" is one of the central themes of the Scripture and often one of the first things people use to describe who God is – God is "the man upstairs" who judges us when we die. However, such a statement without any addition ignores the foundational identity of God: God is not the impartial judge. God knows us, cares for us, and wills that we should spend eternity with him.

If we trust the words of Saint Paul in Romans (6:3-9), death is no longer something to fear. In fact by our baptism, we were baptized into Christ. By entering the waters of baptism, we die with Christ, shedding the "old self," so that we can rise with Christ. Baptistries in the early church were often built to look like tombs for this reason. In our baptism, we look to the cross of Christ as hope for our own resurrection. If death has no power of Christ, then it can have no power over us, his brothers and sisters. A God who loved us enough to become one of us and die for us is certainly no outside observer. In the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus for us, God firmly takes our side.

The accusation is often made of Christianity that faith in the resurrection is simply a nice delusion replacing the harsh reality of permanent death. Anyone who knows the loss of a loved one knows the seeming finality of death, of saying goodbye to someone they hold dear. That pain is real, and nothing can reverse that loss. Yet this weekend's first reading from Wisdom (3:1-9), says that the just only seem to be dead for the "foolish." Is it foolish to cling to hope that God would indeed raise the just? If we can recognize the evil of death when we see it, shall we also not see goodness? Faith can be difficult when reality seems to show anything but God's love and presence. We cling to the cross of Christ at the darkest times, when all seems lost, because nothing else will hold. Ave Crux, spes unica – hail the cross, our only hope.

In the entire corpus of Scripture, even in the face of rejection, blasphemy, and idolatry, is nothing more than faithful to his chosen people. If God can be steadfast in these moments, then God will also be faithful to the one who humbly seeks him in our own time. Jesus promises in the gospel that all who come to him will be raised on the last day. On All Souls' Day, we remember this promise with our own loved ones in mind, asking that God will show them mercy as we know God desires to. Prayer for the dead is a spiritual work of mercy because we offer our own love for those in need, willing something that God desires for them. In praying for the dead, we trust that out of love and in response to our faith, God will raise us all from death into eternal life.

Ad multos annos!

Pastor
